Ellis County Courthouse honored
(The following report was released by Hollerbach & Associates.)

SAN ANTONIO, Texas – San Antonio-based Hollerbach & Associates, an independent real estate services and title research firm, is partnering with the Texas Historical Commission to promote the Texas Historic Courthouse Preservation Program.

The company has been issuing an e-newsletter on a monthly basis to visually celebrate some of the program's biggest success stories.

The latest courthouse restoration to be celebrated will be that of the Ellis County Courthouse in Waxahachie.

Built at the height of the cotton boom in 1897, the Ellis County Courthouse underwent almost $11 million in restoration work in the early part of the 21st century, reopening in 2002.

Hollerbach & Associates is producing a monthly "Courthouse of the Month" e-newsletter, which visually highlights some of the preservation and restoration work that has already been done through the program. The company will also promote the program in a variety of advertising and direct marketing efforts.

The program is designed to promote the preservation of the well over 200 historic county courthouses more than 50 years old that make up a vital part of Texas' rich and diverse architectural and community history. The preservation program has turned the tide of disrepair and deterioration in these courthouses and won national recognition.

"We take great pride in the story told by our courthouses," said Jim Hollerbach, president and CEO of Hollerbach & Associates. "They are the center of our communities and represent Texas and its people in many different ways. We think it's only natural for us to partner with the Texas Historical Commission to promote this worthy program."
